Contents

1 How can we reconstruct Corded Ware Culture chronology and society? 13
1.1 Introduction 13
1.2 Previous research questions and debates 15
1.2.1 Introduction 15
1.2.2 Corded Ware Culture Chronology 15
1.2.2.1 Migration, diffusion or a combination 15
1.2.2.2 Origin 17
1.2.2.3 Preceding cultures 18
1.2.2.4 Motor behind the spread 18
1.2.2.5 Typochronology and absolute dates 19
1.2.2.6 End of the Corded Ware Culture and transition to the Bell Beaker Culture 19
1.2.3 Corded Ware Culture Society 20
1.2.3.1 Introduction 20
1.2.3.2 Technology and economy 20
1.2.3.3 Subsistence 21
1.2.3.4 Settlements 22
1.2.3.5 Graves 23
1.2.3.6 Gender roles 23
1.2.3.7 Individualisation and elites 24
1.2.3.8 Martiality 25
1.2.3.9 The alcohol problem 26
1.2.3.10 Religion and ideology 26
1.2.4 Uniformity or diversity: Scale and regionality 27
1.3 Current research questions 28
1.4 Choosing the dataset 29
1.4.1 Introduction 29
1.4.2 Choosing settlements 29
1.4.3 Choosing settlements in the Netherlands 30
1.4.4 Ceramics from settlements in the Netherlands 31
1.5 Outline 33
1.5.1 Chapter 1: Introduction 33
1.5.2 Chapters 2 and 3: The ceramics from Corded Ware settlement sites and a supra-regional comparison 34
1.5.3 Chapter 4: Corded Ware Culture chronology 34
1.5.4 Chapter 5: Corded Ware Culture society 35
1.5.5 Chapter 6: Gordon Childe and the new approaches to Dutch Corded Ware communities 36

2 Neolithic ceramics from Noord-Holland, the Netherlands 37
2.1 The dataset 37
2.1.1 Introduction 37
2.1.2 Selection of sites for ceramic analysis 37
2.1.3 Location, environment, landscape and subsistence 39
2.2 Methodology 40
2.2.1 Introduction 40

2.2.2 Van der Waals and Glasbergen (1955) type division 40
2.2.3 New theories and methods 42
2.2.3.1 Introduction 42
2.2.3.2 Salanova (2001): Bell Beaker decoration techniques 43
2.2.3.3 Besse (2004): Bell Beaker common ware 44
2.2.3.4 Larsson (2008): Battle Axe Culture and Pitted Ware Culture in southern Sweden 44
2.2.3.5 Furholt (2008): Baden ceramics 45
2.2.4 Methodology of this study 46
2.2.4.1 Introduction 46
2.2.4.2 Technology 46
2.2.4.3 Morphology 48
2.2.4.4 Decoration 49
2.2.4.5 Use 50
2.2.4.6 Inter- and intra-site analysis and regional comparison 51
2.3 Ceramics from the different settlements 52
2.3.1 Slootdorp-Bouwlust 52
2.3.1.1 Introduction 52
2.3.1.2 Technological characteristics 53
2.3.1.3 Morphological characteristics 59
2.3.1.4 Decoration 61
2.3.1.5 Age and use 65
2.3.2 Zandwerven 68
2.3.2.1 Introduction 68
2.3.2.2 Technological characteristics 68
2.3.2.3 Morphological characteristics 69
2.3.2.4 Decoration 69
2.3.2.5 Use, discard and spatial patterning 72
2.3.3 Zeewijk 74
2.3.3.1 Introduction 74
2.3.3.2 Technological characteristics 80
2.3.3.3 Morphological characteristics 80
2.3.3.4 Decoration 81
2.3.3.5 Age and use 82
2.3.4 Aartswoud 84
2.3.4.1 Introduction 84
2.3.4.2 Technological characteristics 85
2.3.4.3 Morphological characteristics 89
2.3.4.4 Decoration 89
2.3.4.5 Use, discard and spatial patterning 91
2.3.5 Keinsmerbrug 92
2.3.5.1 Introduction 92
2.3.5.2 Technological characteristics 92
2.3.5.3 Morphological characteristics 92
2.3.5.4 Decoration 95
2.3.5.5 Use, discard and spatial patterning 96
2.3.6 Mienakker 96
2.3.6.1 Introduction 96
2.3.6.2 Technological characteristics 97
2.3.6.3 Morphological characteristics 97
2.3.6.4 Decoration 101
2.3.6.5 Use, discard and spatial patterning 101

2.3.7 Sijbekarspel-De Veken 102
2.3.7.1 Introduction 102
2.3.7.2 Technological characteristics 102
2.3.7.3 Morphological characteristics 103
2.3.7.4 Decoration 103
2.3.7.5 Use 104
2.4 Diachronic trends 104

3 Regional and supra-regional comparisons of Neolithic ceramic assemblages 105
3.1 Introduction 105
3.2 Ceramics and sites used for comparison 105
3.2.1 Introduction 105
3.2.2 Funnel Beaker sites and ceramics 105
3.2.3 Vlaardingen sites and ceramics 109
3.2.4 Other Corded Ware sites and ceramics in the Netherlands 113
3.3 Variability in the ceramics 115
3.3.1 Comparing the morphological characteristics 115
3.3.1.1 Introduction 115
3.3.1.2 High upright or inward-sloping neck 115
3.3.1.3 Pronounced S-shape 117
3.3.1.4 Enlarged beaker shape 121
3.3.1.5 Beaker shape 121
3.3.1.6 Other forms 125
3.3.2 Comparing the technological characteristics 127
3.3.3 Comparing the decoration 128
3.3.3.1 Perforations under the rim 128
3.3.3.2 Spatula and cord impressions 128
3.3.3.3 Fingertip impressions and short wave moulded vessels 130
3.3.4 Use and discard of the ceramics 130
3.3.4.1 The use of ceramics: Cooking 130
3.3.4.2 The use of ceramics: Storage and repairs 131
3.3.4.3 Ceramic artefacts 131
3.3.4.4 Spatial patterning 132
3.4 International comparison 133
3.5 Concluding remarks 135

4 The Corded Ware Culture Chronology 141
4.1 The Corded Ware Culture chronology 141
4.2 The Dutch Corded Ware Culture chronology re-examined 143
4.2.1 Introduction 143
4.2.2 The two models 144
4.2.2.1 The unilinear model 144
4.2.2.2 Van der Waals and Glasbergen, 1955 144
4.2.2.3 Lanting, 1973; Lanting and Van der Waals, 1976 145
4.2.2.4 Drenth and Lanting, 1991 148
4.2.2.5 Lanting and Van der Plicht, 1999-2000 148
4.2.2.6 Lanting, 2007/2008 148

4.2.3 The two-track model 149
4.2.3.1 Maritime Beakers and a Maritime phase? 150
4.2.3.2 The zone-contraction hypothesis 151
4.2.3.3 Veluwe Beakers 151
4.2.3.4 Hybrid beakers 152
4.2.3.5 Radiocarbon dates and relative chronology 152
4.2.4 The Radiocarbon dates 152
4.2.4.1 Earlier critiques 152
4.2.4.2 Problems with ^{14}C dates 154
4.2.4.3 Assessing the dates 155
4.2.4.4 Technical problems 156
4.2.4.5 Archaeological problems 156
4.2.5 Testing the models 161
4.2.5.1 The unilinear model 161
4.2.5.2 The two-track model 163
4.2.5.3 Further research 165
4.2.6 Conclusion 166
4.3 New ideas on the chronological development of the Corded Ware Culture 167
4.3.1 Absolute dates for the Corded Ware Culture in Noord-Holland 167
4.3.1.1 Problems 167
4.3.2 The start of the Corded Ware Culture in Noord-Holland 170
4.3.2.1 Testing existing ideas on the start of the Corded Ware Culture 171
4.3.3 Chronological developments within the Corded Ware Culture in Noord-Holland 172
4.3.3.1 Chronological ordering of characteristics of the ceramics and observed trends 175
4.3.3.2 Testing existing ideas on the chronology of the Corded Ware Culture: Protruding Foot Beakers 177
4.3.3.3 Testing existing ideas on the chronology of the Corded Ware Culture: All Over Ornamented Beakers 179
4.3.3.4 Testing existing ideas on the chronology of the Corded Ware Culture: Two-track model 180
4.3.3.5 Testing existing ideas on the chronology of the Corded Ware Culture: Thick-walled and undecorated ware 181
4.3.4 The end of the Corded Ware Culture in Noord-Holland 182
4.3.4.1 New ideas on the end of the Corded Ware Culture in Noord-Holland 182
4.3.4.2 Testing existing ideas on the end of the Corded Ware Culture in Noord-Holland 183
4.4 A new regional or supra-regional chronology? 184
4.4.1 The coastal zone 184
4.4.2 The Netherlands 188
4.4.2.1 Funnel Beaker 188
4.4.2.2 Vlaardingen and Corded Ware 189
4.4.2.3 Early Bell Beaker 193
4.4.3 A new chronology 194

5 Corded Ware Culture Society 197
5.1 Introduction 197
5.2 Corded Ware technology, subsistence and economy 197
5.2.1 Introduction 197
5.2.2 Subsistence and technology: Results of the Odyssee project 198
5.2.3 Technology and economy: Comparing ceramic assemblages 201
5.2.4 Technology and economy: Ceramic artefacts 203
5.2.5 Subsistence: Cereal tempering and cereal imprints 205
5.3 Social organisation and individualisation, gender differentiation and the rise of elites 206
5.3.1 Introduction 206
5.3.2 The settlement system: Results of the Odyssee project 207
5.3.3 Social organisation: Studying spatial patterning of ceramics 208
5.3.4 Comparing settlements of different dates and regions 209
5.3.5 Inter-community contacts 211
5.3.6 The alcohol problem: Analysing the use of ceramics 215
5.3.6.1 Introduction 215
5.3.6.2 The social role of alcohol: Who was drinking and what was being drunk? 215
5.3.6.3 Evidence for the use of beakers and other vessels 216
5.3.6.4 How vessels recovered from Corded Ware settlements in Noord-Holland were used 218
5.3.6.5 Comparing the use of beakers between settlement and funerary contexts in the Netherlands 220
5.3.6.6 New ideas on the social role of beakers and their use 221
5.4 Corded Ware ideology 224
5.5 New ideas on Corded Ware society 225

6 Conclusions 227
6.1 Introduction 227
6.2 Gordon Childe: Theoretical background and the first grand narrative of the Corded Ware Culture 228
6.2.1 Theoretical background: A Marxist concept of history 228
6.2.2 Mode of production 230
6.2.3 Culture 230
6.2.4 Change 231
6.2.5 Ideas on the Neolithic 232
6.2.6 Childe's grand narrative of the Corded Ware Culture 233
6.3 Confronting Gordon Childe: New ideas on the Corded Ware Culture 234
6.3.1 The economic base: "A wandering race of hunters and pastoralists"? 234
6.3.1.1 New results: Subsistence 234
6.3.1.2 Confronting Childe on subsistence 235
6.3.1.3 New ideas: The rise of supra-regional contacts 235

6.3.2 The superstructure: "Martial folk who plunder or trade to secure products of distant lands"? 236
6.3.2.1 New results: Ceramics and their use 236
6.3.2.2 New ideas: Beakers as symbol of the importance of the supra-regional network 237
6.3.2.3 Confronting Childe on the superstructure 238
6.3.2.4 New ideas on the Corded Ware superstructure 239
6.3.3 The chronology: "Conquering battle-axe wielders exerted a profound influence wherever they went"? 241
6.3.3.1 New results: The chronological developments in the coastal zone 241
6.3.3.2 Confronting Childe on chronology 243
6.3.3.3 New ideas: Continued traditions and new networks 243
6.4 Corded Ware Culture: A new narrative 245

Literature 249

List of figures 269

List of tables 271

List of appendices 273

Credits 275

Appendix 2.1 277

Appendix 4.1 279

Dutch Summary - Samenvatting 297

Acknowledgements 309

Curriculum Vitae 311